A differential algebraic Lie algebra \mathfrak{g} is called a A -Lie algebra if \mathfrak{g} is a A -group and k and a are A -maps. It follows immediately that if u is an element of the A -Lie algebra \mathfrak{g} , then of G is an algebraic group, and hence, also a differential algebraic group. Suppose G and G^{TM} are connected commutative differential algebraic matrix groups and let $\theta: G \rightarrow G^{\text{TM}}$ be a differential rational homomorphism.

16 Lie Groups and Differential Equations

A differential algebraic group is a group object in the category of differential algebraic sets. It is the solution set in affine space of finitely many polynomial differential equations.

algebraic groups are usually identified with their points in some large algebraically closed field K , and an algebraic group over a subfield k of K is an algebraic group over K equipped with a k -structure. The kernel of a k -homomorphism of algebraic k -groups is an object over K (not k) which need not be defined over k .

Algebraic Groups - James Milne

Lie algebras are an essential tool in studying both algebraic groups and Lie groups. Chapter I develops the basic theory of Lie algebras, including the fundamental theorems of Engel, Lie, Cartan, Weyl, Ado, and Poincare-Birkhoff-Witt.

Differential algebra refers also to the area of mathematics consisting in the study of these algebraic objects and their use for an algebraic study of the differential equations. Differential algebra was introduced by Joseph Ritt in 1950.

The goal of this note is to contribute to the qualitative theory of differential-algebraic systems by providing new asymptotic stability criteria for a class of nonlinear, fully implicit DAEs with tractability index two.

â€¢ Contributions are welcome from all areas of algebra, including algebraic geometry or algebraic number theory, if the emphasis is on the algebraic aspects. Contributions describing applications of algebraic results or methods, for example in coding theory, cryptography, or the algebraic theory of differential equations are highly welcome. An important general criterion for the publication of a paper in the Computational Algebra section is its emphasis on the constructive aspects.
